Barpa holds all relevant insurances, safety accreditations and building licences, and our management systems facilitate successful construction projects consistently. Our systems are best practice, extensive, robust and where applicable are accredited to Australian and International management standards.

Certified by Supply Nation and other State based Indigenous Chambers of Commerce, Barpa offers an Indigenous solution for capital works projects across Australia and is an active participant in Federal, State and corporate capital procurement programs aimed at Closing the Gap for Indigenous Australians.

Description

Barpa has developed a reputation for the successful delivery of technically complex projects, and our people are renowned for their achievements in sectors including Defence, Health, Education, Telecommunications, Security, Research & Development, and Infrastructure. With access to staff across Australia, our people are highly mobile which means we can assemble the right project team with the appropriate skills for every project.

The core of our business is the construction of technical and complex facilities that incorporate innovative design and are often constructed within operating environments. We provide the complete spectrum of project services, from concept through completion to maintenance and renewal. Our success is based on a collaborative approach that builds on our values of RESPECT to ensure the best project outcomes.

Since its inception in 2014, Barpa, which means 'to build' in the traditional language of the Dja Dja Wurrung people, has grown to be one of the more successful Indigenous businesses in Australia with over 40 projects completed and underway nationwide. These projects have been delivered to Government and corporate clients in regional, remote and urban environments.

Indigenous employment has been a high priority at Barpa and our success has enabled us to grow and develop our skilled Indigenous workforce, we are proud to have an Indigenous employment rate of 98%.

Barpa's approach also emphasises the requirement to provide opportunities to Indigenous owned businesses, and those employing Indigenous personnel.

As an Indigenous owned business, Barpa is committed to empowering Indigenous people and Businesses. We embed this commitment into our company and the delivery of our projects by ensuring Traditional Owner engagement activities happen pre and during projects, by providing employment and career development opportunities for Indigenous people either directly in our company or through associated trade contractors, actively pursuing and developing Indigenous trade contractors, utilising the Indigenous Business sector in our supply chain, supporting Indigenous youth in pursuing a career in construction, sponsoring Indigenous sports teams, volunteering staff for Indigenous community projects and paying dividends to our community of Indigenous owners.

Barpa's highly skilled staff have extensive experience in delivering projects and will ensure the success of challenging construction projects, specialising in special purpose facilities or highly serviced buildings, commercial construction projects and facility fit-outs, miscellaneous construction and repairs, projects in operational and secure environments, regional and remote project work, national and multi-site projects and Indigenous labour hire services.
